B2B playbook for Bemore Design Studio.

THESIS: The core opportunity — Bangalore's top builders are launching hundreds of projects. They all need interior design for model units, clubhouses, lobbies, and premium apartments. Getting on their vendor empanelment list is the unlock.

TIER A — PRIMARY TARGETS (LARGE PIPELINE, LUXURY SEGMENT)

Tier A Prestige Group 300+ projects · Luxury	Tier A Sobha Limited 548 projects · Premium	Tier A Brigade Group 275+ projects · Mixed use	Tier A Embassy Group 54M sqft · Luxury
Tier A Godrej Properties 400+ awards · Sustainability

TIER B — MID TARGETS (GROWING, DESIGN-CONSCIOUS)

Tier B Birla Estates 2016 · Modern luxury	Tier B Salarpuria Sattva Commercial + Resi	Tier B Puravankara 86 projects · Premium	Tier B Total Environment Eco-luxury niche
Tier B MAIA Estates Design-forward · Growing

TIER C — NICHE / BOUTIQUE (EASIER ENTRY, SMALLER PROJECTS)

Tier C Legacy Group Boutique luxury	Tier C Sumadhura Group 52+ projects · Whitefield	Tier C Century Real Estate Since 1973 · Established

The three things that matter most for getting in:

Getting to the right person is everything. The buying committee at a builder typically has a Head of Design or VP Projects who drives vendor selection, a Procurement or Purchase head who manages the empanelment process, and a CFO/MD who approves for large projects. Don't cold-call reception — go straight to LinkedIn and find these people by name.

The vendor deck is your ticket. Builders won't meet you without one. It needs your portfolio (with sqft and project type), GST registration, MSME certificate if applicable, past client references, and a 1-page credential sheet. Keep it under 10 slides and be very visual.

The model unit is the foot in the door. Offer to do one model apartment at a sharp rate. Every big builder has 2-4 model units per project. Nail one and you're on the preferred list for the entire project.

B2B PIPELINE — HOW TO GET IN

1. Scout	2. Find DM	3. Warm up	4. Empanel	5. Pilot win
Identify active projects & upcoming launches on RERA Karnataka	Target Head of Design, VP Projects, or Procurement head	LinkedIn + email sequence; reference relevant past work	Submit vendor deck, credentials, portfolio, GST & compliance docs	Offer 1 model unit at competitive rate to prove quality

Who Do you Need & How Much Does a B2B BD Cost?

Title: Business Development Manager — Real Estate & Builder Partnerships

This is NOT a generic sales role. The person must understand real estate developer culture, how builders make decisions, and ideally have some aesthetic sensibility to talk design with Heads of Design. A pure IT sales person won't cut it.

THREE HIRING TIERS — PICK BASED ON BEMORE'S STAGE

Junior / Hungry	Recommended hire ✓	Senior / Brings network
0–3 YRS EXPERIENCE	3–6 YRS EXPERIENCE	6–10 YRS EXPERIENCE
₹4–6L	₹8–12L	₹14–20L
CTC per annum	CTC per annum	CTC per annum
Fixed: ₹35–45K/month	Fixed: ₹55–75K/month	Fixed: ₹90K–1.2L/month
Variable: ₹5–8K/month target	Variable: ₹15–25K/month target	Variable: ₹30–50K/month target
Who: Ex-interior design sales, real estate channel partner, or someone who worked in builder sales	Who: Someone from a builder's procurement team, or a BD person from a competing design firm, or real estate B2B sales	Who: Ideally ex-builder (Prestige, Brigade, Sobha) who has relationships with the exact contacts Bemore needs
Risk: Needs hand-holding. Won't know how to navigate procurement or design heads independently	Risk: Mid-level market, competitive. Need strong variable upside to attract the best	Risk: Expensive. Only worth it if they bring 3+ warm builder contacts from day one

Must-have background (non-negotiable)

3–6 years in B2B sales or business development — real estate, interior design, architecture, or construction materials preferred

Has actually met and pitched to builders or their procurement teams before — not just sold to retail buyers

Comfortable with LinkedIn outreach, cold emailing, and cold calling — this role is 70% outbound in year one

Can present a portfolio and talk aesthetics without being a designer — they don't design, but they can sell design

Based in Bangalore — they need to attend builder events, site visits, CREDAI meetings in person

Ideal background (green flags)

Previously worked at a competing interior design firm (Livspace B2B, HomeLane Enterprise, or a boutique studio) in a BD or client servicing role

Previously worked in the procurement or vendor management team at a builder — they know exactly how the empanelment process works from the inside

Has a personal LinkedIn network of 500+ connections in Bangalore real estate

Has closed a B2B deal worth ₹20L or more — knows what a long-cycle sale feels like

Red flags — do not hire

Only experience is residential interior design sales (selling to homeowners) — builder B2B is a different game entirely

Wants a high fixed salary with no performance component — signals they don't back themselves to close deals

No LinkedIn presence or very thin network — this role runs on LinkedIn. If they don't use it, they can't do the job

Has only worked at large corporates — they won't adapt to the scrappiness a boutique studio requires in early BD

The 5 most common mistakes small design studios make when hiring BD

Mistake 1: Hiring a designer to do BD

Design studios often think "they need to understand our work" so they promote an interior designer into a BD role. Designers are trained to create, not to cold call procurement heads. Different skill sets entirely. The BD hire needs to be a salesperson who appreciates design — not a designer who tolerates sales.

Mistake 2: No variable pay / all fixed

Paying ₹10L all-fixed with no commission sounds fair, but it attracts people who want a comfortable job, not hunters. The best BD people in Bangalore will take ₹7L fixed + uncapped commission over ₹10L fixed. Incentive structure signals what you want from this hire.

Mistake 3: No 90-day target framework

Most studios hire and wait 6 months to see results. Set clear 30/60/90 day targets: 30 days = 20 builder contacts identified. 60 days = 5 qualified meetings. 90 days = 1 empanelment application submitted. Without this, the hire drifts and the founder doesn't know if it's working until it's too late.

Mistake 4: Expecting them to close without tools

The BD hire needs a strong portfolio PDF, a 3-slide capability deck, and a mood board template to send within 48 hours of any builder inquiry. If Bemore doesn't have these ready on day one, the hire can't function. The tools must exist before the hire arrives.

Mistake 5: Hiring full-time when part-time works at first

Consider starting with a 3-month retainer arrangement — ₹60–70K/month + commission — with a full-time offer if 2 empanelments happen in 90 days. This de-risks the hire for Bemore and still motivates the person through commission. Many experienced BD professionals in Bangalore work on retainer + commission across 2–3 boutique clients simultaneously.

Here's the bottom line in plain terms.

The Bangalore market average for a Business Development Manager sits around ₹11.5L, with the typical range between ₹7L and ₹22.8L depending on seniority. Glassdoor But those are generic numbers across all industries. For a boutique design studio at Bemore's stage, the right number is ₹8–12L total on-target earnings for the recommended hire.

The structure that works for this specific role is a modest fixed base (so Bemore's cash flow isn't crushed before revenue comes in) layered with incentive components — activity bonuses in the first 90 days when no projects have closed yet, empanelment bonuses as milestone rewards, and project commissions that scale with deal size. The goal is that a great performer takes home ₹13–17L, while a mediocre one earns ₹8–9L and makes it obvious they need to go.

The most important thing Bemore gets right is the profile, not the pay. The right person has sat across from a builder's procurement head before and isn't intimidated by the process. That experience — knowing how builders think, how to navigate the empanelment system, and how to talk to a Head of Design without sounding like a vendor — is worth far more than a degree or a polished CV.

On AI agents specifically — the biggest time saves are:

(1) daily RERA scraping so you know about new projects before competitors,

(2) automated LinkedIn enrichment to find decision-makers without manual research, and

(3) personalised outreach sequences that reference the builder's specific project and location.

HOW AI AGENTS HELP — SPECIFIC TASKS

Scouting agent
Scrapes RERA Karnataka daily. Flags new project approvals in Whitefield, Sarjapur, North Bangalore. Delivers a hot-lead list each morning.

Decision-maker finder
Cross-references LinkedIn, company websites, and news to identify Head of Design / VP Projects / Procurement at each builder. Auto-updates when people change roles.

Outreach agent
Drafts hyper-personalised emails — mentions their specific project, neighbourhood, and design style. Sends sequences and tracks opens/replies.

Empanelment tracker
Monitors each builder's vendor portal. Alerts when empanelment windows open. Pre-fills forms with Bemore's standard credentials and compliance docs.

Pipeline CRM bot
Auto-logs every interaction. Scores leads by project size, timeline, and design orientation. Tells sales team exactly who to call next.

Market intel agent
Monitors property news, land acquisitions, and new launches. Sends weekly digest — so Bemore always knows before a builder officially announces a new project.

beMore Design Studio Positioning

"Bemore Design Studio is a Bangalore-based interior design and architecture firm targeting B2B revenue from residential developers. Map the exact decision-making structure inside a mid-to-large builder, identify which use cases they outsource vs. keep in-house, what triggers the outsourcing decision, who signs off on vendor selection, and what a winning pitch looks like at each entry point."

The difference: specificity of the problem, not just the goal.

The real picture of how builders actually work with designers.

Builders in India operate in tiers when it comes to design. Here's the honest breakdown:

What they keep in-house: Master planning, building architecture, facade design, structural drawings, regulatory approvals, and common area design for mid-segment projects. Large builders like Prestige and Sobha have 20-50 person in-house design teams.

What they always outsource: Model apartment interior design — almost universally outsourced because it's a sales tool, not a construction deliverable. Show flat styling, furniture procurement, and staging. Clubhouse and amenity design for premium projects. Landscape architecture. Specialty spaces — spas, co-working zones, sky lounges.

What triggers outsourcing: A new project tier they haven't done before (first luxury launch), a tight deadline where in-house capacity is maxed out, a specific design aesthetic they can't replicate internally (say, Japanese minimalism or industrial loft), and cost — outsourcing a model unit is cheaper than keeping that talent on payroll year-round.

The actual entry points — ranked by ease

1. Model units are the easiest and most reliable entry. Every builder needs them. The brief is short, the timeline is fixed, and the budget is real. This is how 80% of B2B relationships start.
2. Clubhouses and amenity floors are the next step up. More complex, bigger budgets, longer relationship. Usually awarded after a model unit win.
3. Turnkey interior packages for buyers is the emerging opportunity — builders like Sobha and Prestige now offer buyers an "interior package" at purchase. The builder takes a margin and outsources the actual execution. Bemore could position as the execution partner here.
4. Commercial interiors within mixed-use projects — retail podiums, lobbies, co-working spaces inside residential towers. Brigade and Embassy do a lot of this.

The right order matters. Don't try all three angles simultaneously. Model units first — it's the fastest path to a paying engagement, the lowest barrier to entry, and it builds the credibility you need for the bigger conversations. Once you've done 2–3 model units for a builder, the turnkey package conversation opens naturally. Clubhouses come after that, or in parallel via the architect referral route.

The one thing that changes everything cold — don't go to procurement first. Procurement people process paperwork. Design heads make decisions. Your first contact at every builder should be the Head of Design or Design Manager. Find them on LinkedIn before you do anything else.

On the AI stack — you don't need to build all of it on day one. The scout agent and contact finder alone will save 10+ hours a week and give Bemore a systematic edge over competitors who are still doing this manually. Start there, it costs under ₹8,000/month to set up.

The simplest way to think about it: a model unit is a builder's most important sales tool, and they need someone else to create it. That someone is Bemore.

The whole game in the beginning is just this — be visible before the brief goes out, respond faster than anyone else, and make it easy for the builder to say yes by reducing their risk.

Everything else follows from that first project.

WHY THIS IS YOUR ENTRY POINT

Every builder needs model units before launch. It's a sales tool — not a construction deliverable — so even builders with big in-house teams outsource it. Budget is pre-approved, timeline is fixed, and the brief is clear. Win one model unit → you're on the preferred list for the whole project.

Budget range: ₹15–60L per unit depending on size and segment. Luxury (4BHK show flat) can go up to ₹1.2Cr all-inclusive.

WHO DECIDES (BUYING COMMITTEE)

Head of Design / Design Manager
Primary decision-maker. Controls the brief, shortlists vendors, evaluates portfolios. This is who you must reach first.

VP Projects / Project Director
Approves timeline and execution. Cares about reliability — will you deliver on time?

Procurement / Purchase Head
Handles empanelment paperwork and commercial terms. Not a design person — keep it simple with them.

HOW TO PITCH — MODEL UNIT SPECIFIC

Your hook

Lead with the sales outcome

Don't say "we do beautiful interiors." Say "our model units reduce sales cycle by showing buyers exactly how their home will feel." Builders care about conversions, not aesthetics.

Your offer

The pilot proposal

Offer 1 model unit at cost + thin margin. Frame it as a trial. Remove their risk entirely. "If you're not satisfied after the reveal, you don't pay full fees."

Your proof

Portfolio by segment

Show 2BHK, 3BHK, 4BHK examples separately. Builders think in configurations. If you've done a luxury show flat — lead with that. If not, show your best residential work and frame it as show-flat-ready.

WHY THIS IS THE EASIEST ENTRY — COMPARED TO OTHER B2B ROUTES

Short decision cycle

Days, not months

A clubhouse project takes 6+ months to award. A corporate office takes a year. A model unit brief is awarded in 1–2 weeks because the builder is always under timeline pressure. You get a yes or no fast.

Low risk for the builder

Small commitment to try you

₹15–20L for a model unit is a rounding error in a ₹500Cr project. The builder is not betting the company on you. They can try a new designer with no fear. This makes saying yes easy.

Clear brief

You know exactly what to deliver

Configuration is fixed (3BHK, 1,800 sqft). Deadline is fixed. Budget is fixed. There's no ambiguity like in a custom residential project where the client changes their mind 10 times.

WHAT BEMORE GETS PAID — REALISTIC NUMBERS

₹15–25L	₹30–60L	2–4 units	₹80–90%
Tier B builder, 3BHK model unit	Tier A builder, 4BHK luxury unit	Per project, typically	Repeat rate once you're in

THE 3 THINGS THAT WIN A MODEL UNIT BRIEF WHEN YOU'RE COLD

Speed beats perfection. The designer who sends a mood board in 48 hours almost always gets the meeting. The one who sends a "we'll come back with a full concept in 2 weeks" gets forgotten. Move fast on first response.

Reference their specific project. Don't send a generic portfolio. Say "for Birla Evara on Sarjapur, we'd go with a warm contemporary palette that resonates with the IT professional buyer profile in that corridor." Show you've done your homework.

Make the pilot offer. If this is your first time with this builder, say: "For this first project, we'll work at a reduced margin. We want to earn the relationship." Removes their risk. Gets you in the door. You make it back 10x on the next project.

The follow-on is the real prize. A single model unit is ₹20L. But a builder with 5 projects a year, 2 model units each, is ₹2Cr/year recurring — from one relationship. Think of the first project as an investment.

A real scenario — how it plays out

Birla Estates is launching Birla Evara on Sarjapur Road. 800 apartments. Launch event planned for October. They need buyers to walk in, fall in love, and book on the spot.

Six weeks before launch, their Head of Design — let's call him Rahul — gets a brief from the MD: "We need 2 model units ready. One 3BHK, one 4BHK. Contemporary luxury feel. Budget ₹40 lakhs total. Deadline is 6 weeks."

Rahul calls 3 interior designers he knows. If he doesn't know anyone, he searches LinkedIn, asks his architect, or looks at who did the show flats for a nearby project he admired.

Bemore gets that call because — through the AI scout agent — they already knew Birla Evara was launching in Q3. They had already connected with Rahul on LinkedIn 3 weeks earlier. They already sent him a 4-line message referencing the Sarjapur project. He remembered the name.

Bemore comes in, presents a mood board in 48 hours, wins the brief, executes in 5 weeks, and delivers a stunning 3BHK show flat.

On launch day, 200 buyers walk through that flat. 140 book apartments.

Rahul looks like a hero to his MD. Bemore gets paid ₹18 lakhs. And Rahul now has Bemore's number saved in his phone.

How Bemore Should Approach Prestige Group for Vendor Empanelment

Prestige is not one brief — it's 8+ simultaneous briefs across different project teams. The empanelment strategy needs to reflect that.

The core reality about Prestige

Prestige has an internal interior design subsidiary called Morph Design Company (MDC). MDC handles Prestige's residential interiors business — fit-outs, turnkey packages sold to buyers. This means Bemore must never pitch as a residential interiors company to Prestige. That lane is closed.

The lane that is completely open: show flats, model units, and clubhouse/amenity design. MDC doesn't compete here. In fact, Prestige outsources show flats precisely because they want an external creative perspective — not the same in-house team that designs every other project.

So Bemore's positioning to Prestige is:

> "We are a show flat and model unit specialist. We work exclusively with builders during the pre-launch phase to create show units that convert site visits to bookings."

Never say "interior design studio." Say "model unit specialist."

The decision-maker map

Manishkumar Mistry — Senior VP, Design Development & Planning — is your primary contact. He sits above the project-level design managers and controls vendor shortlists across all Prestige residential launches. Getting empanelled through Mistry means your name is in the pool for every new Prestige project, not just one.

Below him are project-level design managers for each launch (Falcon City Luxe, Southern Star, Park Grove, etc.). Do not approach them first. If you go to a junior project person, they cannot empanel you — they can only use already-empanelled vendors. Mistry is the gate.

There is also a Procurement Head who manages the formal empanelment paperwork and vendor code registration. You will need to go through that process regardless, but the Procurement Head does not decide who gets shortlisted for creative work — Mistry does.

The exact sequence to follow

Step 1 — LinkedIn warm-up (Days 1–4)

Find Manishkumar Mistry on LinkedIn. Follow him. Over 3–4 days, leave genuine, specific comments on his posts if he's active. Don't pitch. Don't comment anything that sounds like a sales message. Just establish your name in his feed as someone who thinks intelligently about design.

If he is not active on LinkedIn, skip this and go straight to Step 2.

Step 2 — Connection request (Day 4–5)

Send a connection request with a short note. No pitch. Something like:

> "Hi Manishkumar — I follow Prestige's launches closely and the scale of Southern Star and Falcon City Luxe is genuinely impressive. Would be glad to connect."

That's it. The project name reference shows you've done your homework. The absence of a pitch makes you stand out from every vendor who leads with "we'd love to work with Prestige."

Step 3 — First message (Day 6–8, after he accepts)

This is the only message that matters. Keep it to 4 lines:

> "Thank you for connecting. Bemore Design Studio specialises in model units and show flats for residential pre-launches in Bangalore — we're working on [reference project if you have one, or 'multiple projects in Whitefield and Sarjapur Road currently']. Given the scale of Falcon City Luxe and Park Grove, I imagine show flat briefs are live or imminent. Would you have 20 minutes this week or next to see our work?"

Do not attach a portfolio PDF to this message. If he engages, send the portfolio in the next message.

Step 4 — The portfolio PDF (only after he responds)

Prepare a 3-slide PDF specifically for Prestige. Page 1: your best show flat project — full photos, brief, outcome (if you have a "units sold X% faster" result, lead with that). Page 2: your process — timeline, how you work with builder teams, what you deliver. Page 3: why now — the specific Prestige projects you're referencing and what you'd bring to each.

The biggest mistake vendors make with Prestige is sending a 40-slide capabilities deck. Mistry is a Senior VP managing 18+ simultaneous launches. He will not read 40 slides. He will read 3 that tell him exactly what he needs to know.

Step 5 — Formal empanelment submission (parallel track)

While the LinkedIn relationship is warming, simultaneously submit a formal vendor registration through the Prestige website or directly to the Procurement team. Call the main Prestige office in Bangalore (Prestige Falcon Tower, 19 Brunton Road) and ask specifically: "I'd like to understand the process for vendor empanelment for show flat and model unit design — who should I speak with in procurement?"

The empanelment documentation typically requires: company registration, GST certificate, portfolio of completed projects with client references, team credentials (your architects/designers), and a brief company profile. Have all of this ready before you call.

This runs in parallel — not after — the LinkedIn approach. Empanelment paperwork can take 3–6 weeks even after the relationship is established. Start it now.

Step 6 — The meeting

If you get 20 minutes with Mistry, structure it as:

- Minutes 1–3: one specific project you've done that's relevant to what Prestige is building (scale, segment, brief)

- Minutes 4–10: walk through your process for show flats — how fast, how you manage on-site, how you handle builder feedback loops
- Minutes 11–17: ask about Southern Star and Falcon City Luxe specifically — "Is the show flat brief for Southern Star being assigned now? What's the timeline?" Let him talk.
- Minutes 18–20: ask what it takes to get on the shortlist for the next brief

Do not ask for work in the first meeting. Ask what you need to do to earn the right to pitch.

Project prioritisation — which Prestige brief to target first

You have 8+ active Prestige briefs across Batch 1 and Batch 2. Here is the order to target them:

Priority	Project	Why
1st	Prestige Southern Star	Largest active project (4,300 units, 34 acres). Multiple show flat briefs = program opportunity. Brief is live.
2nd	Prestige Park Grove	RERA filed late 2025. Brief window just opened. Least competition right now.
3rd	Prestige Falcon City Luxe	Just launched 2026. Brief window narrowing fast but still open.
4th	Prestige Park Ridge	Imminent launch, early 2026. Time-sensitive.
After winning one	All others	Once you have a Prestige project on your portfolio, every subsequent conversation changes completely.

The point of prioritising Southern Star is simple: if you go in pitching a multi-unit show flat program (2BHK + 3BHK + 4BHK as a coordinated brief), you immediately position Bemore as a strategic partner rather than a single-brief vendor. That is a completely different conversation.

What not to do

- Do not cold-email the general info@prestige address. It goes nowhere.
- Do not approach project-level site managers or sales teams. They cannot empanel you.
- Do not mention you also do residential interiors or turnkey fit-outs. MDC does that. Prestige will perceive you as competing with their subsidiary.
- Do not send a proposal with pricing in the first conversation. It signals desperation.
- Do not follow up more than once in 10 days. Mistry is managing a company with 57 ongoing projects. He is not ignoring you — he is genuinely buried. One follow-up, then let it breathe.

The timeline you should expect

Prestige is a large, process-driven organisation. Even with a warm relationship, the realistic timeline is:

- Week 1–2: LinkedIn connection established
- Week 2–3: First message sent, response received (not guaranteed)
- Week 3–5: Portfolio shared, initial meeting
- Week 5–8: Formal empanelment paperwork submitted and processed
- Month 2–3: First brief invitation (to pitch alongside 2–3 other vendors)
- Month 3–4: Brief awarded (or not)

This is why you run the LinkedIn track and the procurement track simultaneously, and why you should be approaching Prestige now even though you may not win a brief for 3–4 months. The brief you win in month 4 is the one you're preparing for today.

The builders where you can move faster — Nambiar, Abhee Ventures, Godrej Woodscape (Sowmya Prakash) — should be your immediate revenue focus. Prestige is your portfolio-building target: one Prestige project on your credentials sheet changes every other conversation you have in the Bangalore market.

Got it. Starting from scratch actually works in your favour here — it forces discipline. Here's everything you need, day by day.

Bemore × Godrej Woodscape — Immediate Revenue Playbook

Why this is the right target right now

Sowmya Prakash just joined Godrej Properties from Puravankara where she was SVP Design. She is building her vendor network from zero. She has no loyalties, no incumbents, no "we always use X." Godrej Woodscape on Budigere Cross is a 28-acre pre-launch — the show flat brief hasn't been assigned yet. This window exists for maybe 3–4 more weeks before she starts taking formal meetings with vendors.

Starting from scratch is fine because Sowmya is also starting from scratch.

Before you do anything — build these two things this week

You cannot approach Sowmya empty-handed. But you don't need a finished portfolio. You need two specific things:

Thing 1 — A "Concept Proof" (2 days of work)

Pick one room — ideally a living room or master bedroom — and create a mood board for it as if it were a show flat for Godrej Woodscape. The project is forest-themed (Budigere Cross, green corridor near the airport). So the material palette should reflect that: warm wood tones, stone textures, deep greens, organic shapes. Nothing clinical or generic.

This is not a full proposal. It is a single mood board that shows you've already thought about their specific project. This is what separates Bemore from every other vendor who sends a generic capabilities deck.

Tools: Canva, Milanote, or even a well-assembled PowerPoint. 4–6 images, a colour palette, 3 material callouts, one line of design intent. That's it.

Thing 2 — A 3-slide PDF (1 day of work)

Slide 1 — Who Bemore is One paragraph. Studio founded in Bangalore. Specialises in model units and show flats for residential pre-launches. Currently working in [corridor] and [corridor]. Do not list every service you offer.

Slide 2 — Your best work Even if it's a residential project you've done for a homeowner — photograph it properly (natural light, wide angle, no clutter) and present it as your design language reference. Builders know the difference between a show flat and a home, but they also know good design when they see it. One strong image beats ten mediocre ones.

Slide 3 — What you'd bring to Woodscape One paragraph about the project specifically. Budigere Cross, forest corridor, pre-launch buyer profile, what the show flat needs to accomplish emotionally. This slide tells Sowmya you've done your homework and you're not carpet-bombing every builder in the city.

The Day-by-Day Plan

Day 1 (Today) — Find and follow

Search LinkedIn: "Sowmya Prakash Godrej Properties"

Follow her profile. Do not connect yet. Spend 5 minutes reading her recent posts and activity.

Note: what has she posted or liked since joining Godrej? What language does she use — does she talk about sustainability, community design, buyer experience? This tells you how to frame your message later.

Also search: "Godrej Woodscape Budigere Cross" on Google. Read everything. Understand the project's stated design narrative, the location, the possession timeline, the unit mix. You should be able to talk about this project as if you've been tracking it for months.

Day 2 — Start the mood board

Work on the Woodscape concept proof. Don't overthink it. The goal is one compelling image that shows your design instinct applied to their specific brief. Forest theme. Warm materials. Luxury but not cold.

While you do this, also check if Sowmya has any mutual connections with you on LinkedIn. A warm introduction — even from a loose contact — is worth 10x a cold connection request.

Day 3 — Send the connection request

Send a connection request with a short note. LinkedIn limits you to 300 characters. Use all of them:

> "Hi Sowmya — I've been following Godrej Woodscape closely since the Budigere Cross announcement. The forest-corridor positioning is rare for that zone. Bemore Design Studio specialises in show flats for residential pre-launches — would be glad to connect."

That's it. No ask. No "I'd love to work with you." Just a signal that you know the project and you do relevant work.

Then wait.

Day 4–5 — Build the 3-slide PDF while you wait

Don't stare at your phone waiting for the connection to be accepted. Use these days to finish the PDF. It should be ready before she accepts, not after.

One important thing about the PDF: name the file specifically. Not "Bemore Portfolio.pdf." Name it: "Bemore Design Studio — Godrej Woodscape Reference.pdf"

When she opens her downloads folder in three weeks, she will find it instantly.

Day 6–7 — She accepts (likely). Send the first message.

Once she accepts, wait 24 hours. Then send this message. Copy it exactly, adjusting the bracketed parts:

> "Thank you for connecting Sowmya. Bemore Design Studio does model units and show flats exclusively for residential pre-launches in Bangalore — we're currently working in Whitefield and Sarjapur Road corridors.
>
> Woodscape's forest-corridor positioning on Budigere Cross is exactly the kind of brief we love — there's a clear design narrative to build the show flat around, not just a spec sheet to furnish.
>
> If the show flat brief is being scoped right now, I'd love 20 minutes to show you a concept we've already put together for the project. No obligation — just a conversation.
>
> Would any slot work this week or next?"

Four things this message does right:

1. States what you do in one sentence — no ambiguity
2. References Woodscape specifically, not "your projects"
3. Offers something concrete (a concept already done) — removes her risk
4. Asks for a small commitment (20 minutes), not a big one

If she doesn't respond in 5 days — one follow-up only

> "Hi Sowmya — just following up on my note below. Happy to share the Woodscape concept we've worked on whenever it's convenient. No rush at your end."

That's the entire follow-up. No desperation. No "just checking in." After this, let it breathe for 2 weeks before any further contact.

The meeting — what to do and say

If she says yes to 20 minutes, here is the exact structure:

Minutes 1–2: Set the frame

> "I'll keep this to 20 minutes. I want to show you one concept, tell you how we work, and then hear from you about where the Woodscape brief is right now."

You are telling her the structure upfront. This signals professionalism and respects her time. Most vendors ramble. You won't.

Minutes 3–8: Show the Woodscape concept proof

Walk her through the mood board. Talk about the design decisions — why those materials, why that palette, what it says to a buyer walking in for the first time. The goal is not to impress her with the concept. The goal is to show her how you think. She can change the direction. She cannot teach a vendor how to think.

End with: "This is just a starting direction — the brief would obviously shape everything. But I wanted you to see that we'd already been thinking about this specifically."

Minutes 9–14: How beMore works

Cover three things only:

- Timeline: how fast you can go from brief to execution (give a specific number — "4 weeks from brief sign-off to handover")
- Process: how you manage the builder feedback loop (site visits, revisions, approvals)
- What you need from them: clear brief, access to the unit, one point of contact

Minutes 15–19: Let her talk

Ask: "Where is the Woodscape show flat brief right now — is it being scoped, or has a timeline been set?"

Then stop talking. Whatever she says tells you everything about the next step. If she says "we're still deciding on the unit," the brief is not yet assigned — you're early, which is good. If she says "we've already shortlisted vendors," ask if you can be considered alongside them.

Minute 20: The close

> "What would it take to get Bemore on the shortlist for the Woodscape show flat? I'm happy to submit whatever you need — company profile, references, a more detailed concept. What's most useful to you?"

You are asking her to tell you how to win. Most vendors never ask this. The ones who do almost always get a clear answer.

The parallel track — don't skip this

While the LinkedIn sequence is running, do this simultaneously:

Call Godrej Properties Bangalore office (their Whitefield sales office or main Bangalore number). Ask: "I'm a design firm interested in vendor empanelment for model unit and show flat design — who in your procurement or design team should I reach out to?"

Get a name. Get an email. Submit your company profile and GST certificate proactively. Empanelment paperwork at Godrej can take 3–6 weeks. Starting it now means by the time Sowmya says yes, you're already in the system — not starting from zero.

The numbers — what you're playing for Godrej Woodscape is 28 acres, 600+ units, pre-launch. A show flat brief for a project at this scale and price point is typically:

- 2BHK show flat: ₹12–18L design + execution fee
- 3BHK show flat: ₹18–28L
- 4BHK show flat: ₹30–50L
- If they want all three BHK configurations: ₹60–90L total

Even a single 3BHK brief at ₹20–25L is meaningful immediate revenue. And because Sowmya is building her vendor network, a well-executed Woodscape show flat means you'll be in her shortlist for every Godrej South zone launch that follows — Lakeside Orchard, Woodscape Phase 2, and whatever she files next.

This is not just one brief. It's a relationship with a design head who will greenfield at least 4–5 more projects in her tenure at Godrej.

The one thing that will make or break this

The concept proof mood board you build this week.

Every vendor Sowmya meets will bring a portfolio of past work. You will be the only one who brings work about her specific project. That asymmetry is the entire advantage. Protect it — don't show the concept to anyone else, don't post it publicly, treat it as something you made only for her.

When she asks "did you make this specifically for Woodscape?" — and she will ask — the answer is simply: "Yes. We thought it was more useful than showing you someone else's project."

That answer should win beMore the brief.

Sumadhura Sarang's final tower was just announced Sarang by Sumadhura — possession is December 2026, which means their model unit brief is likely going out in the next 4–8 weeks. That window is open right now. If Bemore reaches out this week and gets on Rahul's radar before the brief is formally issued, you're in the conversation from the start rather than scrambling to respond after 3 other firms already have.

Assetz is the other big opportunity — they have multiple projects launching simultaneously in 2026 Assetz Projects, including Trees & Tandem on Sarjapur Road and several others across North Bangalore. A builder running 7–8 launches in parallel almost certainly can't design all their model units in-house. That's exactly the gap Bemore fills.

Your target at Sumadhura is Pavan S. Haribal.

His title is Deputy General Manager — Design Management at Sumadhura Infracon Pvt. Ltd., a role he joined in August 2024. ZoomInfo He is a trained architect — he holds a Bachelor of Architecture from BVB CET, Hubli ZoomInfo — so he will understand design language immediately. You're not pitching to a procurement bureaucrat. You're pitching to a fellow designer who now manages vendor relationships.

Why he's the perfect contact for Bemore:

His background includes directing design and procurement processes and innovating branded experiences — at CoWrks, Future Retail, and Café Coffee Day. ZoomInfo This means he thinks about interiors as brand expression, not just construction. That is exactly the language Bemore should use with him.

Employee counts — key insights for Bemore's pitch strategy:

Sobha has 4,121 employees — massive in-house team, so pitch specifically as "external fresh eye for the show flat, not competing with your interiors division." Prestige has 1,496 employees Tracxn and 18 active launches. Godrej Properties has only 408 employees Tracxn despite being a Tier A builder — leaner than expected, which means faster decisions. Birla Estates has just 136 employees Tracxn despite ₹1,460Cr revenue — very lean, decisions happen fast. Sumadhura has 345 employees Tracxn. Assetz has only 92 employees, running 13 simultaneous launches — the most stretched team on the entire list.

Interior designer job openings — the intelligence angle:

Sobha has an active Interior Designer vacancy right now Indeed — HR contact Deepa.n@sobha.com / 9900041479. This is useful for two reasons: it confirms their design team is hiring, and it gives Bemore an insider angle — if Sobha is hiring, they likely need external show flat vendors too.

Prestige Group has its own interior design subsidiary called Morph Design Company (MDC) — which means Bemore must position as a complementary vendor for show flats specifically, not a competitor to their internal team.

MASTER SHEET OF LEADS : bemore_mastersheet_.xlsx